Pecora Trial Resumes in NY Federal prosecutors made a last-ditch effort Tuesday to win a conviction in the Bernard Madoff fraud case, calling the former chairman of the Nasdaq stock exchange to the stand as a witness.

George Perez, who was with Madoff when he met with regulators in 1992 to discuss his dealings with an investment partnership he had set up with his mother, was called to the stand late Tuesday afternoon. Perez identified Madoff as the man who “voluntarily and continually denied” his involvement in the Madoff investment partnership until shortly before he was arrested in December 2008, claiming he had been duped. Madoff was found guilty last year of securities fraud, but his sentence was suspended after a federal judge ruled he suffers from a serious mental illness that prevents him from serving any more prison time. Those who attended Pecora’s testimony said it was different than in the Manhattan courtroom where the defendant sat in a straight-backed chair dressed in a dark suit and displayed little emotion. “He does not look well, and he is not well. His skin is sallow. He is not happy to see us,” said Paul Ginsburg, a lawyer who watched a small group of friends and family members who had stood together in the courtroom for the past three months. Madoff lawyers claim their client suffers from a mental illness that prevents him from comprehending the charges against him. Prosecutors, however, have accused him of manipulating clients and would-be investors throughout his career. A verdict in the trial, which has brought some of Wall Street's top names to testify in the courtroom, is expected Monday.

Perez's testimony spanned
